est. 2005

The Bollard is a free monthly magazine available at hundreds of locations throughout Southern Maine. Our readers pick up The Bollard at supermarkets, coffee shops, libraries, restaurants and corner stores from Bath to Bridgton to the Kennebunks.

Thanks to our media partners at the Bangor Daily News, The Bollard also reaches readers throughout the state and the nation online. Content posted on our website, thebollard.com, also appears on the homepage of the BDN's website, bangordailynews.com — the most popular online source for Maine news.

Born from the ashes of Portland's pioneering alternative newsweekly, Casco Bay Weekly, The Bollard was established in 2005 to keep independent, provocative journalism alive in Maine. The Bollard is a proud founding member of the Portland Buy Local campaign, and is printed at Alliance Press, in Brunswick.

We exclusively publish the work of writers, photographers and visual artists living in Maine, and cover local subjects of interest to a diverse demographic of readers: politics and history, social and economic issues, visual and performing arts, food and drink, fishing and hiking, and much more. Advertising with The Bollard is an affordable and effective way to reach tens of thousands of enlightened Mainers. The clean layout and eye-catching design of our full-color publication ensure that every ad gets the attention it deserves. Our rates include professional ad design and full color at no additional charge.

The Bollard is the Maine magazine the locals actually read. You can reach our dedicated readership for a fraction of the price other print publications charge. Join us and see how the The Bollard can bring more business to your business!
