A Message from Governor Paul R. LePage

The importance of Maine agriculture to our heritage, identity and economy cannot be overstated. Maine’s 8,200 farm operations provide wholesome foods, thousands of jobs and over $740 million in farm receipts, not including direct sales at farms or farmers markets. Agricultural enterprises large and small are benefiting from the recent growth of Maine agriculture.

This is an exciting time for Maine-made products and Maine agriculture. My administration, through the efforts of the Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry and other state agencies, is working hard to help Maine’s reach its full potential. Farmers, producers, processors and distributors have an even greater potential to help feed our neighbors, the region and the world.

The Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry continues to improve its state-generated marketing, communications and technical assistance efforts to support agricultural enterprises large and small. The result is more communication with the public on the ongoing success of Maine agriculture and the efforts of Maine’s largest natural resources agency to help support the continued growth and profitability of small businesses.

Local, quality, sustainable—these three words are being used to describe Maine agriculture as part of our enhanced marketing effort. Two recent examples of rapid growth in Maine agriculture are the maple and horticultural industries. Since 2010, Maine maple syrup production has more than doubled (114% increase) and the number of taps has increased 26.5%. Since 2009, Maine horticulture sales have increased 43.6% from $49.1 million to $70.5 million (2014), more than double the national average (18%)! Maine is working to achieve similar success with many other agricultural sectors, including potatoes and wild blueberries.

The success of Maine farms, as well as the hard work that produces these impressive results, can be seen when you visit agricultural operations throughout Maine and talk with the men and women responsible for putting local, quality, sustainable food on your table. Please join me in celebrating their efforts.

Sincerely,

Paul R. LePage
Governor

Welcome to the Maine Open Farm Day, Sunday, July 23rd, 2017

Do Maine farms have their own personality?

No two Maine farms are alike and the Maine families that own and manage each farm have their individual identity.

On Maine Open Farm Day, July 23rd, you are invited to an outdoor adventure that explores the unique, rural character of each participating Maine farm. You’re encouraged to linger for a visit, hear the farm story and see many sources of Maine’s local food.

Maine has a rich diversity of agricultural crops not seen on a commercial scale in the rest of New England. We set records for numbers of new farmers, numbers of artisanal cheesemakers and support for farmer’s markets and agricultural fairs.

Maine farm families have a history of agricultural productivity. The background and working of each farm are Maine Open Farm Day conversation. But a farmer’s eye is usually trained toward the future crop, so expect a crop prediction and a weather commentary. Forces of nature also shape the personality of the farmer and the farm.

This newspaper supplement is an informative guide to participating Maine Open Farm Day locations. You can also learn more about interesting farm visit sites by clicking the Get Real Get Maine web link to the new Maine Agri Tourism Map.

We at the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry rate Maine farms a personality plus.

Come see for yourself on Open Farm Day.

Enjoy the visit.

An update from
MAINE AGRICULTURE IN THE CLASSROOM

This year has been an incredible year for Maine Agriculture in the Classroom! It seems the sky’s the limit with so many teachers participating in trainings, and so many schools incorporating hands-on agriculture into their curricula. Partnerships with Maine School Garden Network, Maine Farm to School and FoodCorps have expanded, and we are looking forward to increasing the agriculture literacy presence in school libraries across the state again this year.

Maine School Garden Day at the Falmouth High School in May was a wonderful day with educators from across the state. Their entire school system is incorporating local foods into the cafeteria. The school has an orchard, several gardens and a new permaculture initiative which includes a large hoop house just across the street.

Our “Read ME Agriculture” volunteer reading program was so much fun this spring! A special THANK YOU to over 160 volunteer readers that visited 742 classes in 86 schools across Maine. Our book was “What’s in the Garden?”, a riddle book about vegetables. Please check the website for our new book for 2018 and sign up as a reader for your favorite school or classroom this fall.

We are so pleased to welcome Erika Verrier as the new Maine School Garden Network Coordinator. Erika is excited to work with the 5 School Garden Coach programs and her experience with pest management has already impacted them and will be expanding. Another exciting program you should watch for at Maine fairs this summer is the “School Garden Grown” awareness project in the exhibition hall. Look for special stickers on items from the local school gardens! Check msn.org for more information.

MAITC is now accepting registrations for our Summer Teachers Institute at the University of Maine in Farmington July 31 through August 4th. Curriculum workshops and farm tours will fill this busy week! Check MaineAgintheClassroom.org for more information. Anyone interested in receiving our e-newsletter should sign-up by sending a message to maitc@maine.gov and learn more about what is happening with Ag education across the state.

In the past year, over 17,000 Maine agricultural license plates have funded field trips, school gardens and greenhouses, materials for classrooms and school libraries, Agriculture Literacy and Leadership grants, educator trainings, and more. It’s estimated that over 98,000 Maine students have benefitted.

This wouldn’t be possible without the support of every Maine motorist who displays a Maine agriculture plate. We salute you.

GET 'EM WHILE THEY’RE FRESH!
Wild blueberries are local food superstars. COURTESY WILD BLUEBERRY COMMISSION OF MAINE

The wild blueberry season is nearly upon us. Starting in late July and running fast through early September, approximately 100 million pounds of wild blueberries will be raked and mechanically harvested from the rocky barrens and fields of Maine.

Wild blueberries are indigenous to this region of the world—they are over 10,000 years old, and while the annual harvest has been taking place for generations, global demand for this antioxidant-rich superstar has put wild blueberries on the “superfoods” map.

Savvy consumers know that these delicious little berries are available year-round in the frozen foods section of supermarkets across America. But once a year, in late July and August, these amazing fruits can be enjoyed fresh. Those of us living in and visiting Maine have the easiest access to these fresh blue wonders, as Maine is the only state in the entire country that grows wild blueberries commercially.

Before the rise of farmer’s markets, it was difficult to get significant quantities of fresh wild blueberries into the hands of consumers. The effort it takes for growers to personally process them versus selling them to large processors for freezing is demanding. Today, however, there’s increased awareness surrounding local foods, and the fresh wild blueberry market has earned itself a place at the table (and in farmer’s markets everywhere).

The uses of wild blueberries have grown well beyond pancakes and muffins. Smoothies, gelato, salad dressings, grilling sauces, dipping sauces, cocktails, and even beer are now popular uses. Maine food producers and chefs are experimenting with new ways to use them.

The annual wild Blueberry harvest has increased dramatically over the last several decades. Of the 100 million pounds harvested annually from Maine, 99 percent is frozen within 24 hours of harvest, when flavor and antioxidant power are at their peak; and 1 percent (or 1 million pounds) is sold fresh. Be sure to be on the lookout for fresh Maine wild blueberries this summer, and remember to buy them frozen for year-round convenience.

FEED YOUR WILD SIDE WITH THE PERFECT WILD SUPERFRUIT, 10,000 YEARS IN THE MAKING.

Small, hearty Wild Blueberries are unique to Maine, and have thrived in its thin glacial soils since the last ice age. Maine’s challenging climate gives low-bush Wild Blueberries their intense blueberry taste and high level of antioxidants - 2x the antioxidants of regular blueberries. Today, Maine is the largest grower of Wild Blueberries in the world.

Find tiny, potent Wild Blueberries in the freezer case all year long, or fresh at farm stands and in the produce section during Maine’s summer harvest.

Open Farm Day is an annual family adventure in which farms throughout the State of Maine open their gates to offer the public an opportunity to learn about the business of agriculture.

The 28th annual Open Farm Day is set for Sunday, July 23, with more than 60 farms from across the state signed up to participate.

Visiting hours are generally 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., although some farms extend their hours for special events.

Most locations will have demonstrations, displays, farm-raised products for sale and animals and crops to experience. Activities may include barn and field tours, milking, hay rides, nature trails, beautiful scenery, samples for tasting and refreshments.

Many farms are handicapped accessible, have restrooms, and can handle group or bus tours.

For more information, visit getrealmaine.com and click on agricultural events.

Springvale Farm Walk

Sunday July 23, 2017 • 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Experience the variety of Maine agriculture while walking through fields, orchards, woods and pastures!

Springvale Farm Walk is a four-mile, self-guided walk that connects to ten farms. The walk is organized by Sanford Trails and participating farms. Featured farms raise sheep, Christmas trees, mushrooms, vegetables, berries, and apples. They also make cheese, bottle hard cider and make maple syrup.

The path is well-marked and generally follows gentle terrain. Walkers may start and end anywhere. A shuttle service is available. There are a few rough spots, but certainly walkable by children. Sturdy shoes are recommended. We welcome dogs on leashes and owners who pick up after them. Parking is available at McDougal Orchards, 201 Hanson Ridge Road, and Carpenter Tree Farm, 14 Hazen Drive (off Blanchard Road).

Three Rivers Land Trust provides a pancake breakfast at 8 to 9 a.m. at McDougal Orchards. Each farm along the way serves a complimentary refreshing drink. A few of the farms also sell produce and prepared food.

This event is held rain or shine.

Parking and a shuttle service is available. For more information visit sanfordtrails.org.

MAINE FARMLAND TRUST
GROWING the future for FARMING

WE’VE BEEN TAKING CARE OF THE IMPORTANT THINGS
SINCE 1901.

MAINE FARMERS HAVE BEEN OUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS SINCE THE START.

Knowing what really matters to Maine farmers is the key to our longevity.
Which is why we offer policies for farm owners like you. We cover farm dwellings, machinery and equipment, autos, personal property, liability and liability for your workers, along with other specialty coverages.
We firmly believe that partnerships are powerful.
