Carol Burnett glad for show's freedom

BY STEVE KNOPPER CHICAGO TRIBUNE (TNS)

The "Mary Worthless" sketch, in which Carol Burnett wears an old-lady wig and lampoons the Sunday funnies' most annoying busybody, was not as terrible as the sketchcomedy heroine recalls. It has Harvey Korman taking a cake to the face, then flinging himself out a window. And it has Burnett, sensing something has gone terribly wrong with the sketch, ad-libbing a closing line: "Don't be surprised if I show up on your doorstep someday better yet, be surprised, because I'm not doing this

"It wasn't really landing well, and things were going wrong with it," Burnett, 83, says of the 1972 sketch on her namesake TV hit. "But we were very freewheeling on our show. From the start, I never wanted to take a long time to tape it in front of an audience. Today, sometimes, they (take) the concept of 20 minutes of a show and take five or six hours to tape it in front of a continually bored audience, and it's ridiculous.

"We'd do about an hour and 15 minutes, because I'd do a lot of (audience) Q-and-As, which I'd then edit," she continues, in a half-hour phone interview from her home in Santa Barbara, California. "We'd be out of there, with all the sketches, costume changes, musical numbers, in time to go to dinner. It was like a Broadway show. We did it quickly — even if stuff went wrong, unless the scenery would fall and knock us out, we kept going.'

When it comes to "The Carol Burnett Show, which aired from 1967 to 1978, drew an average of 30 million viewers per episode and won 25 Emmy Awards, Burnett has been in a reflective mood recently. Her live act, "Laughter and Reflection with Carol Burnett," centers on a wide-ranging audience question-and-answer session. She'll discuss her famous ensemble, including Korman, Tim Conway and Vicki Lawrence, whom she discovered after the 17-year-old actress wrote her a fan letter; her post-show movie roles, including Miss Hannigan in "Annie"; and her prolific career on Broadway, perhaps peaking with an early-1970s role alongside the late Rock Hudson in "I Do! I

For her fourth book, "In Such Good Company: Eleven Years of Laughter, Mayhem and Fun in the Sandbox," due this September, Burnett rewatched all 276 episodes of the show. "Not straight through," clarifies. "I fast-forwarded it through a lot of stuff."

It's true that some of the 'Burnett Show" sketches, preserved for eternity in a 3,720-minute boxed set two years ago and dozens of YouTube clips, seem stuck in the 1970s. But many are timeless comedy manuals. instructing the world on the art of deadpan (such as Conway's hapless dentist, accidentally injecting himself with the anesthesia while Korman heroically tries not to bust up); economic writing (such as when Conway yes-dears Burnett's suspicious wife to sleep after a wrong number); and physical comedy (the way nail-drying secretary Mrs. Wiggins fills out a skinny dress by, as costume designer Bob Mackie instructed Burnett in the early days, "just sticking your butt into it").

'So much of it was spontaneous, and we were really having a good time,' Burnett recalls. "I can look at some shows where I can see in the actors' faces that this is about the 50th take of something, and it's probably around 1 o'clock in the morning, and you can see people are just tired. And I don't believe in that."

Like many comedians, Burnett had a difficult childhood — both her parents had a drinking problem. Her grandmother raised her in Hollywood, and they attended eight movies per week, allowing Burnett to fall in love with Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, many of whom made guest appearances on her TV show

Initially, in part because her mother aspired to interview movie stars as a journalist, Burnett enrolled at UCLA, intending to major in journalism. (She'd been editor of the student newspaper at Hollywood High School, interviewing famous alumni such as actor Joel McCrea, though the principal shut down her Lana Turner encounter when he found out she'd been cutting classes to meet the subjects.) Aspiring to write plays in college, she landed in theater arts; during a required acting class, she stood up to do a comedy scene.

"I was terrified," she recalls. "Another student and I were teamed up by the teacher, and we decided we would do something kind of light and fun. The students laughed and I went, 'Whoa! This is what I've been missing my whole 18 years! I like this feeling."

She landed in the off-Broadway "Once Upon a Mattress," which pushed her in the direction of TV hit "The Garry Moore Show." Burnett won her first Emmy there and became so well-known that CBS signed her to a 10-year deal, which eventually became "The Carol Burnett Show." During the golden age of TV sketch comedy, Burnett's run was the gold standard, drawing guest stars Ella Fitzgerald. Jimmy Stewart (an old friend), Lucille Ball, Ray Charles, Vincent Price, the Jackson 5 and Bing Crosby.

"I look back on it and, not that I want to do it again, but I missed some of it." she says. "When I would see certain things happening, I would say, 'I wish we were doing the show, so I could see a takeoff on that.' Today, I'd want to do the Kardashi-
