Here's who should host 'SNL' this season

BY BETHONIE BUTLER THE WASHINGTON POST

We don't yet know who will host the season premiere of "Saturday Night which returns on Oct. 1. But we got to brainstorming potential hosts for the sketch comedy series and came up with enough suggestions to fill out the calendar for its 42nd season (based on last season's 21 episodes).

Here are our picks, loosely pegged to their upcoming projects

1. Lin-Manuel Miranda The Tony-winning "Hamilton" creator is our pick for the season premiere. He thinks quickly on his feet even in high-pressure situations. And a "Hamilton" parody would be "SNL" gold. There's a reason Kate McKinnon's Olya Povlatsky has mastered the English phrase "Oh my god, you haven't seen Hamilton?"

Miranda

2. Sarah Paulson Paulson just won an Emmy for her standout performance in Ryan Murphy's "The People v. O.J. Simpson: American Crime Story" phy's other FX anthology series, "American series, Horror Story." The Marcia Clark cameo will basically write itself.

Paulson

3. Donald Glover

Glover, now earning rave reviews for his FX dramedy "Atlanta," previously honed his comedic chops as an actor on "Community" and a writer for "30 Rock." And the show might not even need to book a musical guest since he's also seen success as the rapper Childish Gam-

4. Rami Malek

When he won an Emmy for his performance on "Mr. Robot," Malek's first instinct was dry humor: "Tell me you're seeing this too." Also, Malek and "SNL" cast member Pete Davidson apparently get mistaken for each other quite often there has to be a sketch in should apthere somewhere.

5. Emily Blunt

The actress leads next month's mystery thriller
"Girl on a Train," and anyone who saw "The Devil Wears Prada" knows she "Buts, who late in the internet.)

9. Laura Benanti
Honestly, we hope Lorne
Michaels called the Tonycan be hilarious.

6. Issa Rae

comedy "Insecure" (pre- Stephen Colbert." She could she showed off her expandmiering Oct. 9), but it's the trademark deadpan she delivers in her breakout hit web series "The Misadventures of Awkward Black Girl" that has us convinced she'd be great on SNL.

7. Gina Rodriguez

The Golden Globe-winning actress charms in CW's "Jane the Virgin" (which returns Oct. 17) and we can already envision a sketch that shows off her insane rap skills: Unassuming middle school teacher defeats one of her students (please be Davidson) in a rap battle.

8. Winona Ryder

On the heels of her "Stranger Things" comeback, the actress should host the show again this time, with cameos from the child stars of the Netflix series. One of the "SNL" players pear as the beloved Barb. (Or, Barb could appear as Barb, which just might winning actress immediately after her pitch-perfect People are really excited Melania Trump impression host in November or have a recurring presence on the show a la Justin Timber-

10. Benedict Cumberbatch

The actor, slated to play the title role in Marvel's "Dr. Strange" this November, has a rabid fan following and does a host of celebrity impressions — including one of Tom Hiddleston. (Hmm ... who is impersonating Taylor Swift these days?)

11. Kiefer Sutherland

The star of ABC's new fall show "Designated Survivor" has experience hosting "SNL" ahead of a presidential election. In 1991, the man who would become Jack Bauer played a potential candidate with no interest in running against President George H.W. Bush.

12. Owen Wilson

The actor, who stars in "Bastards" this November, has appeared on "SNL" as his "Zoolander" character, Hansel, but has never hosted. We have a feeling new cast member Melissa Villaseñor could have some fun during Wilson's monologue since she does a pretty spoton impression.

13. Hailee Steinfeld

The Oscar-nominated actress is already getting buzz "The Edge of Sevenfor teen," which also hits theand is a fan favorite in Murabout Rae's upcoming HBO on "The Late Show With aters this November, and we think we're due for an ed skill set as a Barden Bella in "Pitch Perfect 2" before releasing a provocative single last year.

14. Rihanna

After her tour ends in November, the singer (who has been a musical guest several times) should take the full hosting plunge. Think of all the jokes at Drake's expense. And the potential return of ShyRonnie!

15. Will Smith

Somehow, the Oscarnominated actor, who starred in a very funny '90s sitcom, has never hosted "SNL" He'll be in "Collateral Beauty" this December, so maybe there's an opportunity to see him star in a sketch alongside his famously quirky children.

16. Idris Elba

Between his acting and musical talents, the actor would make a great "SNL" host. In February, he'll star alongside Matthew McConaughey in "The Dark Tower." Plus, think about how dapper the bumper photos will be.

17. Emma Watson

The actress will play Belle next year in the highly anticipated live-action version of "Beauty and the Beast." "SNL" already did an edgy "Harry Potter" spoof back when Lindsay Lohan hosted in 2004, but other Hermione update. 18. Abbi Jacobson and Ilana Glazer from "Broad City'

The pair should host when their Comedy Central show returns sometime next year. With musical guest Snoop Dogg, obvious-

19. Aziz Ansari

The former "Parks and Recreation" star, who just won an Emmy for writing his Netflix comedy "Master of None," should get a warm welcome at Studio 8H. Have him host ahead of the show's second season, which is expected to hit the streaming network sometime in the spring.

Keegan-Michael Key and Jordan Peele

The comedic duo ended their Emmy-winning sketch variety show last year and are working on separate projects. But Peele recently told Entertainment Weekly that they "will always come back and do things together." May we suggest hosting 'Saturday Night Live?'

21. Bill Nye

The beloved "Science Guy" should host an episode ahead of his Netflix talk show "Bill Nye Saves the World," expected to premiere in the spring. An unconventional choice? Maybe. Then again, he appeared on "Inside Amy Schumer"...
