Waking Windows Festival set for Portland Oct. 10

the town of Winooski. Vermont, has been home to one of the coolest music festivals in the Northeast: Waking Windows, a carefully curated day of diverse, independent music, visual and literary arts and comedy in small-to-mediumsized venues throughout the downtown area. Much like the Belfast Free Range Music Festival and the All Roads Music Festival, also in Belfast, it provides festival-goers with a unique opportunity to see a lot of great, lesser-known bands in one fun day.

This past May, after playing the fifth annual Waking Windows, Portland musician Jeff Beam was telling Waking Windows organizers Paddy Reagan and Nick Mavodones or the past five years, how impressed he was with ans in nine venues across also includes less-common Madaila, Swale and Maryse the festival as a whole.

"While we were backstage eating cheesy pasta and lis-

A mere five months later, Waking Windows Portland will makes its debut on Saturday, Oct. 10, with more than downtown Portland. While the complete schedule is too jam-packed to list in full here, suffice to say that Beam, Mavodones and Reagan were busy bees this summer.

"Multiple shows within a close walking distance is key to the fest's identity and said success," Beam. "There's a palpable excitement present about having so many talented acts showcased within a short period of time and space.'

Venues include Portland live music staples like Empire, Portland House of Music and Events, the Asylum Downstairs, Blue, the Space Gallery and Local Sprouts, all of which are on Congress Street except Asylum and Portland HOME, which are venues such as the teensyweensy bar the Bearded Lady's Jewel Box, local favorite Tandem Coffee and an outdoor venue in Congress Square Park.

The lineup features a number of Portland bands, mostly operating within the rock, indie and psychedelic genres, including local favorites like Sunset Hearts, Leveret, Foam Castles, KGFREEZE, Butcher Boy, Armies, Altered Gee, Lisa/Liza, Micromasse, S.S. Cretins, Conjjecture, Paper Castles, Murcielago, and of course, Jeff Beam himself. There's also Maine, New England and New York bands, like Mainers Greg Jamie and Jacob Augustine, New Hampshire's Nat Baldwin, Rhode Island's Ravi Shavi, VerSmith, and Alpenglow and Guerilla Toss of New York.

"Historically, there's been a lot of Portland/Burlington crossover at the various Waking Windows festivals," said Beam. "Though most of the festival's lineup features Maine bands, there's a healthy section of New England represented, as well as New York City and beyond."

Also featured at the festival will be a Literary Crawl, organized by Nat Baldwin and featuring a wide array of writers and poets from all over the region, from eastern Maine writers like Gregory Howard, Michele Christle and Henry Finch, to Portland writers like Catie Hannigan, to writers like Tim Horvath, Otessa Mosh-60 bands, writers and comediless than two blocks away. It mont's Lowell Thompson, fegh and many more from comfor a full lineup.

New York, Pennsylvania and beyond; sessions are set for noon, 1 and 2 p.m.

And if that wasn't enough, there's also a huge lineup of standup comedy from 3 to 5 p.m. at Blue, featuring local comics like Annie Russell, Connor McGrath, Hilary Boone, Will Green, Kendall Farrell, Aharon Williams, Josh Star and Tim Hofmann.

"I think the scope of the local bands featured is a strength of the festival. It skews towards psych/indie/ rock/underground, but I think there's something for everyone," said Beam. "If it goes well this year, we'll be back bigger and better next Advance tickets for Waking Windows Portland are $20; visit wakingwindows.

'The Shift' puts you in a nurse's shoes for 12 hours

BY VIRGINIA LINN

PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE

"The Shift" by Theresa Brown, RN; Algonquin Books (272 pages, $24.95)

U.S. medical schools typically send out books to their incoming first-year class to give students a glimpse of the profession they're about to embark upon.

Rush Medical College in Chicago, for example, mailed to its class of 2019 "The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks," the true story of a poor black woman whose taken without her knowledge in 1951 — have been used to develop everything from the polio vaccine to gene mapping.

University of Pittsburgh

years has mailed out Atul Gawande's "Complications: A Surgeon's

BOOK Notes on an REVIEW Imperfect Science" for an illuminating look at the life of a surgeon.

There's now a new book to add to this list: Theresa Brown's "The Shift," which should be required reading for all incoming medical and nursing students — or anyone who is a patient or visitor in a hospital.

A clinical nurse who lives in Philadelphia's Point Breeze, Brown takes readers through a typical 12-hour day on a local oncology ward.

Through her clear and compelling narrative, readers gain a new appreciation of what is involved with being a riences in her 2010 book,

Medical School for several nurse on the front lines of modern health care and the colossal responsibility they have in caring for very sick patients during these highly regulated, complicated and confounding times.

This is the second book about nursing by Brown, 50, a former English professor at Tufts University, who quit teaching mid-career to become a nurse.

She became a popular contributor to The New York Times "Well" blog and is a columnist on its opinion pages, lending an eloquent voice from the medical community. Brown, a mother of three children, also lectures around the country about the challenges of the nursing profession.

She recounted many expe-

"Critical Care."

In "The Shift," she begins her day with a two-mile bike ride to work before sunrise on a brisk November day. "Biking to the hospital gives me an unexpected patina of toughness, which matters in health care," she writes. "Hospitals are filled with caring staff, but resilience and determination are prized as high as empathy.'

From the moment she clocks in at 7:03 a.m., her day will be a whirlwind of tough decisions, tense moments, fear, doubt, heartache, compassion and joy.

She receives papers on the patients she'll care for that day: Richard is a lymphoma patient in his late 70s to whom she'll have to administer a risky treatment that her husband to get her ready, woman with a candy dish in her room who's nearing the end of her six-week stay for leukemia treatments. There's also Sheila, in her mid-40s, who came in with a blood clotting disorder.

It seems like a manageable load until Brown is notified that Candace also will be one of her patients. Candace is what's known as a PITA Pain in the Ass — because of her frequent demands that keep nurses as busy as two normal patients. (She brings her own supply of disinfecting wipes and has a rotating set of family and friends who help sanitize her room.)

Dorothy gets the good news in the morning that she's well enough to go home. She alerts could cure him — or kill him. and then ... waits. Waits for Dorothy, 57, is a cheerful the papers to be signed. Waits for the discharge instructions to be administered. Waits until Brown can break away from the demands of her other patients. The nurse must give Richard the risky drug that requires close monitoring.

After reading this book, hospital patients and visitors may no longer wonder: Why is it taking so long to be discharged? Why doesn't the nurse come instantly when I call? How is a nurse so busy with just four patients?

"A shift lasts 12 hours," she writes. "Twelve hours of holding a few lives in my hands, trying to make order out of the chaos of bodies and disease, working within a health care system that sometimes forgets it exists to serve human beings rather than bureaucrats or businessmen.'
