

OBITUARIES

CHARLES W. GODDARD

CARLISLE, Pa. - Charles Walter Goddard, 88, of East Millinocket and Ambajeju Lake, passed away peacefully in Carlisle, PA, on September 13, 2016, with his daughters by his side. He was born in Millinocket to Bertram and Marguerite Goddard and attended Schenck High School.

He graduated from the University of Maine in 1950, where he majored in education and excelled in basketball. He married, taught high school and coached basketball in Camden and Lubec before joining the Great Northern Paper Company. With the help of relatives, he built the family home on Cedar Street, and his camp. He enjoyed fishing and hunting trips with lifelong friends, and regaled us with those stories for decades afterwards. He and Missy, his Brittany Spaniel, enjoyed farm sitting for his much-loved cousin, Linda Adams Trickey. Nothing pleased him more than cooking Chernobyl chicken over the fire at camp for family and friends. After retirement, he spent most of his time at his camp, or becoming a world traveler with Heidi and Paul, or in Texas with his beloved companion, Greta. After Gretas passing, he lived in Carlisle, PA, during the winter. He was inducted into the University of Maine Sports Hall of Fame in 2012.

Charlie is survived by daughters, Peggy Ferguson of Lincoln, Cheryl Hale (Robert) of Carlisle, PA, and Heidi Goddard (Paul Cerqua) of Chelmsford, MA; 4 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren; his brother, Bert (Rose); sister-in-law, Lorie Goddard; and the mother of his children, Betty Goddard. Many very special nieces and nephews and the entire Hanaway family called him Uncle Charlie and meant the world to him. He was predeceased by his parents; his son, Charles Jr. (Chuckie); brother Richard; and Greta Hanaway.

Charlie was a Catholic. A Celebration of Life will be held in summer 2017 at Charlie's camp. Memorial contributions may be made to Community Health and Counseling Hospice or your local animal shelter.

HELEN (CLEMONS) CORO

MEDWAY - Helen (Clemons) Coro, 88, passed away peacefully on Friday, September 16, 2016, with her good friend and neighbor by her side. She is now reunited with her beloved son, Bernard, who gave his life for his country in Vietnam; and her husband of 55 years, Adolf. Helen was born June 12, 1928, in Denmark, Maine, the daughter of Frederick and Mary (Jewett) Clemons.

She graduated from North New Portland High School in 1947. She met her soul mate, Adolf, and they married June 21, 1947. On May 29, 1951, she gave birth to her only child, Bernard. Helen led a quiet life devoting herself to her son and husband. In 1954 they moved to Medway. When Adolf started his auto salvage business in 1960, Helen was at his side doing the books and even assisting him in the yard if he needed a hand. She enjoyed putting together puzzles, reading her Bible, playing the organ and cooking for her men.

She is survived by a brother, Richard Clemons and a special sister-in-law, Tina Brown, known as "Little Sister"; neighbor and true friend, Linda Madore; and several nieces, nephews and in-laws. Helen was predeceased by her husband Adolf; son, Bernard; brothers, Alton, Hubert, Frederick and Lawrence; and sisters, Thelma, Margaret and Martha.

Funeral services will be held 11 a.m. Wednesday, September 21, at Lamson Funeral Home, 17 Western Avenue, East Millinocket. Friends are invited to visit with the family in the hour preceding the service. Interment will be at the Grindstone Cemetery in Medway. Gifts in memory of Helen may be sent to Community Health and Counseling Services Hospice Program, 313 Enfield Road, Lincoln, ME 04457. Messages of condolence may be expressed at www.lamsonfh.com.

TERRY LYNN BATE RETKE

BANGOR - Terry Lynn Bate Retke, 52, of Bangor, passed away on Aug. 13, 2016, at Eastern Maine Medical Center following a long illness. She was born Oct. 20, 1963, the daughter of Larry Bate and Sandra Kay (Stoehr) Beaulieu and graduated from Evergreen H.S. in Evergreen, Colo., class of 1972.

While attending Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colo., Terry worked at the local YMCA, where she mentored children in one of its programs. She often recalled this experience with fond memories, especially the time the YMCA took the children to see Pope John Paul II's visit to Denver in the summer of 1993 as part of the World Youth Day Conference.

Another job Terry greatly enjoyed was waitressing at the Red Lobster in Boulder, where she had many interesting conversations with customers.

Terry loved to travel and visited 40 of the 50 U.S.

states. She also loved her cats, and eating spicy food and potato chips dipped in mustard. Her favorite song was Delta Dawn and she often included the phrases right on and far out in conversations.

Most of all, Terry loved her son, Sam Bate Knight of Bangor; her family; her longtime companion, Erv Stone; her nieces, Emma and Grace; her nephew, Jack; and her friends in AA and at The Barn.

Terry was predeceased by her brother, Kevin Bate, in January 2011. She is survived by her mother and stepfather, Kay and Harry Beaulieu of Randolph; her father of Denver; her son, Sam of Bangor; sisters, Michelle Missy Begin of Chelsea, Cheryl Rand of Wilton and Kelly McRorie of Prineville, OR, and their families; brothers, Joe of Bangor and Peter and his family of Jay; companion, Erv Stone of Bangor; and many close friends.

A memorial service will be held in the spring.

LOUISE DENISE VIENNEAU SHELLEY MASON

JACKMAN - Louise D. Vienneau Shelley Mason passed away peacefully Saturday, September 10, 2016, at C.A. Dean Hospital, after several years of enduring a terminal illness. She was born to Edmund and Adrienne Vienneau on July 28, 1940, in Holeb, the third oldest of their 4 children.

As the family of a railroad section foreman, her family moved from Holeb to Brownville. Louise attended the Sacred Heart Academy Convent in Jackman, where she continued to live as a wife and mother raising her three children: Linda, Dennis and Glenn. Louise was married to her first husband, William E. Shelley, in 1963. She remarried to Stanley E. Mason Jr. in 2000, residing in Tomhegan Township on the shore of Moosehead Lake. Louise's life revolved around her husband, her children, her grandchildren and her family. She always made everyone feel welcome. Louise loved lots of things like baking sweets for the family, lobster rolls, lemon meringue pie, yellow roses and blue grass music. A selfless woman who had a good word and a smile on her face, she put everyone's needs before her own. She was a devoted Christian at St. Anthony's/St. Faustina Church and she was a loving friend to many.

She was predeceased by her parents, Adrienne and Edmund Vienneau; her son, Glenn Shelley; her two brothers, Leon and Paul Vienneau; her great-granddaughter, Michelle Dunshie; and her parakeet, Piper. She is survived by her husband, Stanley E. Mason Jr.; her daughter, Linda Hamilton and husband, Kirk, of Greenville; her son, Dennis Shelley and wife, Jill, of Jackman; her stepdaughter, Cindy Lee Dunshie of Kingman, AZ; her sister, Jeanne Pinette of Jackman; her sister-in-law, Evelyn Holloway of Kitty Hawk, NC; her sister-in-law and brother-in-law, Dotty and David Mason of Mt. Vernon; her grandchildren, Nikki Hamilton, Cassidy and Miranda Shelley, Keely Taylor and Andrew and Alishia Flagg; her great-granddaughters, Oakley Murray and Carolyn Dunshie; her god daughter, Lisa Pinette; as well as many other loving family members and friends who frequently kept in touch with her.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Friday, September 23, at St. Faustina Church of St. Anthony's Parish in Jackman. Visitation with family will be before the funeral Mass at St. Faustina from 9-10 a.m. Interment will be in St. Anthony's Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, those who wish may make a memorial contribution to St. Faustina Church Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 457, Greenville, ME 04441. Arrangements are under the care of Giberson Funeral Home, 18 River St., Bingham. www.gibersonfuneralhome.com

Novelist who inspired 'Field of Dreams' dies

BY MATT SCHUDEL
THE WASHINGTON POST

W.P. Kinsella, a Canadian writer who published more than 25 books but who is best remembered in the United States for just one, "Shoeless Joe," a magical exploration of baseball and fantasy in an Iowa cornfield that inspired the 1989 film "Field of Dreams," died Sept. 16 in Hope, British Columbia. He was 81.

His literary agent, Carolyn Swayze, said in a statement that Kinsella's death was doctor-assisted, a legal procedure in Canada since June. Other details were not disclosed, but he was known to have had serious complications from diabetes.

Before he turned to writing in the 1970s, Kinsella had a varied career, including working as a taxi driver, government clerk, insurance salesman and restaurant owner. He was 46 when his first novel, "Shoeless Joe," was published in 1982.

The book may have been hard to classify — a magical realist fantasy touching on farming, a reclusive author, fathers and sons, dogged faith and, most of all, baseball — and it was not universally well received.

Yet "Shoeless Joe" became a literary phenomenon that would sell more than 1 million copies. In a review in the New York Times, writer Daniel Okrent described it as a "lyrical, seductive and altogether winning concoction."

The tale follows the whimsical dreams of an Iowa farmer, Ray Kinsella, who looks out at his cornfield and, on the novel's opening page, hears a voice say, "If you build it, he will come."

Surprising his relatives and even himself, Kinsella plows up part of his corn crop to construct a baseball diamond, complete with lights, backstop and grandstand. He carefully tends the grass in left field, and after three years, a mystical apparition appears in an antiquated baseball uniform.

He has come. The player is "Shoeless" Joe Jackson, one of the greatest players of his time and whose .356 career batting average that is still the third-highest in history. After emerging from the cornstalks and onto the Iowa field of dreams, Jackson invites teammates from the 1919 Chicago White Sox — infamously known as the "Black Sox" after the betting scandal that got them banished from baseball — to join him in a glorious romp of innocence.

But the players are not visible to everyone: Only those who trust in the magical powers of baseball and its ability to forge bonds across time have the ability to see Shoeless Joe. For those who believe, baseball becomes a faith as strong as any religion.

"A ballpark at night," Kinsella writes, "is more like a church than a church."

The story continues as another fateful voice intones "Ease his pain." Kinsella, the central character, interprets the cryptic command as a personal mission to find and kidnap the reclusive author J.D. Salinger, who accompanies him on a baseball road trip into the past. (After the actual Salinger threatened legal action, the character's name was changed in the film adaptation to Terence Mann and was played by James Earl Jones.)

The novel includes a touching evocation of the two-inning career of a ballplayer named Moonlight Graham, who in real life became a small-town doctor.

"Field of Dreams," which starred Kevin Costner as Ray Kinsella and included Ray Liotta as Shoeless Joe and Burt Lancaster as Moonlight Graham, became a cultural phenomenon in its own right. It was filmed on a farm in Dyersville, Iowa, and the baseball diamond created in the cornfield became a destination for fans from around the world.

"I know there are many who are troubled, anxious, worried, insecure," Kinsella wrote. "What is the cure? ... The answer is in the word, and baseball is the word."

William Patrick Kinsella was born May 25, 1935, in Edmonton. His parents were Americans who ended up in Canada during the Depression and stayed there. His father was a semiprofessional baseball player.

Kinsella grew up on a farm in Alberta without electricity or motorized vehicles. He didn't attend school until he was 11, when his family settled in Edmonton. He held a variety of jobs in Edmonton and Victoria, including owning a pizzeria, before studying at the University of Victoria, from which he graduated in 1974. He received a master's degree from the Iowa Writers' Workshop at the University of Iowa in 1978. He taught at the University of Calgary from 1978 to 1983 and grew to detest academic life.

In 1977, Kinsella published a collection of humorous stories, "Dance Me Outside," set on a Canadian Indian reservation, which became the basis of a 1994 film of the same title. His stories about Indian life were perhaps better known in Canada than his writings on baseball, but he was sometimes criticized for appropriating tribal folkways for humorous purposes.

Kinsella had a barbed personality — "more angry and cynical than I would ever make my characters" — and said his chief aim as a writer was to make money.

"I'm a manufacturer," he said in 1993. "I'm in business to make my living as a writer."

His marriages to Myrna Salls, Mildred Clay and Ann Knight ended in divorce. His fourth wife, Barbara Turner, died in 2012.

In the mid-1990s, Kinsella had a relationship with Canadian writer Evelyn Lau, who later wrote disparagingly about him. He sued for defamation before the case was settled out of court.

In addition to "Shoeless Joe," Kinsella published several other books about baseball and small-town life, including "The Iowa Baseball Confederacy," "Box Socials" and "The Dixon Cornbelt League." In 1997, he sustained serious injuries after being struck by a car while walking and was unable to write for several years. In 2011, he published his final novel, "Butterfly Winter," about twin baseball-playing brothers in Central America.

He recognized that his signature achievement would always be "Shoeless Joe," with its lyrical look at baseball, family bonds and America.
