

OBITUARIES

RONALD WAYNE ANDREWS, SR.

 CORINTH - Ronald Wayne Andrews, Sr., 73, died peacefully March 4, 2016, at a Bangor healthcare facility. He was born May 15, 1942, in Bangor, the son of Donald and Dorothy (Cousins) Andrews.

One week after Ron and his new bride, Brenda were married he joined the U. S. Air Force, serving his country as a cook ... a job he enjoyed very much. He often spoke about being stationed in Greenland. It was a place he thoroughly enjoyed. When he got out Ron went to work at Bangor Hydro, first as a meter reader, and later as a truck driver. He retired with 30 years of service there. After that he and his wife Brenda owned and operated R & B Auto for at least 10 years. Ron belonged to the American Legion Post 0115 in Corinth. He liked to hunt and fish, but his passion was working on cars. Ron will be remembered as a great father, and a loving grandfather.

In addition to his parents and his wife of 51 years, Brenda, Ron was predeceased by a sister Dawn. He is survived by son Wayne Andrews and wife Lori, and daughters Tina Andrews, and Lisa Dorr and husband Dennis; grandchildren Amy Genereux and husband Joseph, Ashley Andrews and fiancé Lucas Bradford, Nicholas Dorr and wife Heather, Matthew Dorr and wife Brittany, Kaleb Dorr, and Breanna Andrews; a great granddaughter Avery Dorr; several nieces and nephews; and special family friend Ellen White. He thought an awful lot of her and enjoyed her visits immensely.

The family would like to thank the staff at the Maine Veterans' Home in Bangor for the wonderful care Ron received while he was there.

A funeral service will be held 11 am Wednesday, March 9, 2016 at Brookings-Smith, 133 Center St., Bangor, with Rev. Bruce Stevens officiating. Friends are welcome to call 10 am until time of service Wednesday. Interment with military honors will be at Corinthian Cemetery in the spring. Those who wish to remember Ron in a special way may make gifts in his memory to the Maine Veterans Home, 44 Hogan Road, Bangor, ME 04401. Condolences to the family may be expressed at www.BrookingsSmith.com

PAUL S. ALDRICH

 BANGOR - Paul S. Aldrich, 80, died peacefully March 3, 2016 at a local hospital surrounded by his loving family. He was born Nov. 23, 1935, in Bangor, son of Albert G. and Elizabeth M. (Perry) Aldrich.

Paul was a veteran of the U.S. Marines, serving during the Korean War. He was employed as a Security Officer at EMMC for 29 years.

Surviving are his wife of 52 years, Rosalie (Brooks) Aldrich of Bangor; 2 children, Scott E. Aldrich of Naples, FL and Paulette E. Aldrich of Bangor; 2 grandchildren, Coral O'Brien and Cayman Aldrich and one sister, Jean S. Aldrich of Florida. Paul was predeceased by two sisters, Irene and Rosalie and one brother, Joseph.

A private Funeral Liturgy outside of Mass will be held Tuesday, March 8, 2016 at Brookings-Smith, 133 Center Street, Bangor. Condolences to the family may be expressed at www.BrookingsSmith.com.

ROBERT CHARLES CARTER

MARSHFIELD - Robert Charles Carter, born April 4, 1943 to Vaughn and Christine Carter (Farmer) in Brunswick, Maine, passed away March, 5, 2016 from stage 4 non-small cell lung cancer at his home in Marshfield, Maine.

He was the beloved husband of Joan Dorr Carter, who he married in Lubec of July 3, 1965. They had two children for whom he was so proud - Robert Wayde Carter and his wife Toni of Marshfield, and Kristyne Evelyn Carter Currier and her husband, Jeffrey Currier of Gardner Lake - Marion Township. He was predeceased by his first born daughter, Melissa.

He leaves behind nine grandchildren who truly adored him. They held such a special place in his heart. Gunky was loved so much by them all. His grandchildren are Britany Carter Scull and husband, Bill; Aaron Currier and his wife, Shannon; Alex Currier and his wife, Kirsten; Timothy Carter and his wife, Sarah; Matthew Carter; Ian Currier; Anderson Currier; Libby Carter and McKenna Carter. Additionally, he was blessed with three great-grandchildren who lit up his life - Audrey Currier, Wesley Carter and Emersyn Currier.

Bobby (Gunky) was a veteran of the United States Army, serving as a medic/paratrooper. He retired as a Maine State Game Warden and served 15 years on the Board of Directors of Bar Harbor Banking and Trust Company. He was a devoted member of the Machias Valley Baptist Church and his love for our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, was important to him. Bobby had a great business sense. He and Joan bought Helen's Restaurant on Main Street in Machias. Bobby had a vision for the area of the causeway in Machias, which he felt was underutilized. He and Joan moved Helen's there to its present location. They also built and operated the Machias Motor Inn at the same location.

Bobby had a love of old guns, especially Winchester, which led him to open a gun shop. He enjoyed traveling to guns shows, and he was considered an expert in identifying and valuing Winchester, receiving inquiries from across the country.

Bobby had a smile for everyone. He never held a grudge. He was forgiving and always saw the best in everyone. He was the best son, brother, husband, father, grandfather, uncle and friend that anyone could ask for.

In addition to his wife and children, he leaves behind a brother, Aubrey Carter; a sister, Jetta Matthews and her husband, Elliot; sisters in law Judy Hanscom and Joyce Jamison and husband, Allan. He had a special place in heart for his many nieces and nephews, along with special friends David and Donna Burns, Donnie and Linda Vose, and Marilyn Schoppee.

Funeral services will be held at the Machias Valley Baptist Church in Machias on Tuesday, March 8. A social gathering will commence at noon, with the celebration of life service to follow at 1 o'clock. Burial will be held at 2pm in the Longfellow Cemetery, Machias. Donations in lieu of flowers can be made to the Downeast Community Hospital Emergency Room Fund, or to Machias Valley Baptist Church. Bud Collins, colorful Hall of Fame tennis commentator, dies

BY MATT SCHUDEL
THE WASHINGTON POST

Bud Collins, widely considered the country's leading voice and foremost authority on tennis, who helped popularize the sport through his writing, television commentary and infectious enthusiasm, died March 4 at his home in Brookline, Massachusetts. He was 86.

He had complications from Parkinson's disease and dementia, said his wife, Anita Ruthling Klausen.

Collins, who was named to the International Tennis Hall of Fame in 1994, was a sports columnist at the Boston Globe for almost 50 years and was one of the first sportswriters to make the transition to television.

During his 35 years with NBC, Collins provided piquant and sometimes irreverent analysis at major tennis tournaments around the world, becoming almost as famous as Martina Navratilova, Jimmy Connors, Pete Sampras and other stars of the sport.

In 1979, he helped inaugurate NBC's "Breakfast at Wimbledon" broadcasts, quickly winning renown for his witty commentary and his wardrobe of garishly bright trousers.

Collins was a modestly talented tennis player in his youth â " he once won a national mixed-doubles title â and had been a college coach. But in his early years as a sportswriter, he covered baseball, basketball and boxing, and he didn't find his niche as a tennis writer until 1963, when the Globe sent him to the Davis Cup matches in Australia.

"I went and found a great game, but a very stuffy game," he told the Miami Herald in 1985. "I wanted to have fun, so I covered tennis the same way I covered other sports. And I used the same approach when I began to broadcast tennis."

Without giving up his column in the Globe, Collins began to cover tennis on Boston's public television station, WGBH, in the mid-1960s. He later moved to CBS and then to NBC. In time, he would write books with some of the sport's greatest players, a memoir and an encyclopedia of tennis that has been in print for more than 30 years.

Collins believed his responsibility was to take readers and viewers inside the sport, but some people considered him either too flippant or, by contrast, too probing.

Arthur Worth Collins Jr. was born June 17, 1929, in Lima, Ohio. He grew up in Berea, Ohio, where his father was athletic director at what was then Baldwin-Wallace College.

Collins attended Baldwin-Wallace, where he played tennis and worked on the student paper. After graduating in 1951, he served in the Army, then moved to Boston to pursue graduate studies in journalism at Boston University. Before writing his thesis, he joined the staff of the Boston Herald. (He was belatedly awarded his master's degree in 2009.) He joined the Globe in 1963.

Beginning in the late 1950s, Collins spent several years as the tennis coach at Brandeis University, where one of his players was Abbie Hoffman, the future radical activist. Hoffman's approach to tennis, Collins recalled, was very conservative.

In addition to tennis, Collins covered many of Muhammad Ali's heavyweight fights in the 1960s and 1970s, and he wrote about politics and the Vietnam War.

After 35 years at NBC, Collins was let go in 2007. He then went to ESPN and continued writing for the Globe until 2011.

Former President Carter says he no longer needs cancer treatments

REUTERS

Former President Jimmy Carter said Sunday that he will no longer need treatment for melanoma, a type of skin cancer that had spread to his liver and brain, a spokeswoman said.

The 91-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner will continue to be observed by doctors, but will not need treatment with a promising immunotherapy drug that helps the body's immune system target cancer cells, said Deanna Congileo, spokeswoman for his non-profit public policy center, the Carter Center.

Congileo told Reuters in an email that if doctors find that the former president's cancer returns, he will resume treatment at Emory University's Winship Cancer Institute, where he received radiation and immunotherapy treatment from August 2015 through February, 2016. Doctors also surgically removed a portion of his liver where melanoma lesions were present.

The former president shared his news at a Sunday school class he teaches in his hometown of Plains, Georgia, Congileo said.

Carter started treatment in August for melanoma that had spread from his liver to his brain. In December, he said he was cancer-free but that he would continue to receive treatment.

At the time, Carter said he would continue to receive regular doses of pembrolizumab, a new treatment that is part of a promising class of drugs that harness the body's immune system to fight cancer. The immunotherapy is manufactured by Merck & Co under the brand name Keytruda.

While about 30 percent of patients treated with the drug experience significant shrinkage of their cancer, only approximately 5 percent experience complete remission, said Dr. Marc Ernstoff, director of the melanoma program at the Cleveland Clinic's Taussig Cancer Institute in Ohio who is familiar with the drug but has not been involved with Carter's care.

Carter, a Democrat, was elected president in 1976, and served only one term. He helped negotiate the 1978 Camp David Accords between Israel and Egypt.

But his presidency was clouded by economic problems and the Iranian hostage crisis, and Carter lost his 1980 re-election bid to Republican Ronald Reagan.

He has since won worldwide acclaim as a humanitarian and advocate for democracy, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in 2002.
