LITTLETON — Aroostook County business, economic and municipal leaders gathered on Friday at the Southern Aroostook Agricultural Museum to brainstorm marketing goals for the region.

“We have had very good attendance and lively, creative discussion,” Alain Ouellette, planning and development division director of the Northern Maine Development Commission, said during the lunch break. “This is a great opportunity for the Maine Office of Tourism to outline its plans for marketing in the next year.”

Ouellette said the questions asked by the roughly 20 attendees not only focused on their own tourism enterprise, they also centered on what they could do to grow The County as a whole.

“There is a real spirit of collaboration here,” he said. “It is not just ‘me.’”

According to a new report from Aroostook County Tourism, which sponsored the gathering, the target audience for tourism is mainly from the northeastern United States, Atlantic Canada and Quebec, per research conducted by the Maine Office of Tourism.

Plans for increasing tourism include pursuing a major overhaul of the Aroostook County visitors guide, continued growth online and in social media, and a presence at more trade shows to advertise what The County has to offer.

Carolann Ouellette, director of the Maine Office of Tourism, said she felt that the attendance level showcased how involved people are in improving tourism in The County and bringing in new ideas each year to bump up tourism numbers.

“This is one of the few of the eight tourism regions that has a summit like this, and I really enjoy coming to it.” she said. “People here are invested in their communities and in making The County as a whole grow.”

Psychiatrist Dr. Anne Hallward in Portland has been named the 2016 recipient of the American Women in Psychiatry’s Jeanne M. Spurlock Social Justice Award, which recognizes the outstanding work of one psychiatrist on behalf of marginalized people to tell their stories, improve their lives and advocate for their health and human rights. It memorializes the life and work of physician, educator and writer Jeanne M. Spurlock, who dedicated her career to the issues facing marginalized communities such as poverty, racism and sexism. Hallward received the award in recognition for her work creating Safe Space Radio, a radio program and podcast that offers a respectful forum for courageous conversations about difficult subjects. She received the award on May 17 at the American Psychiatric Association’s Women national meeting in Atlanta. Hallward trained at Harvard Medical School, where she also served on the faculty. She supervises psychiatry residents at Maine Medical Center through Tufts University School of Medicine. She founded Safe Space Radio in 2008 after noticing that shame and stigma seemed to be at the heart of most of the problems she was seeing in her patients – addiction, depression, trauma, loneliness and even suicide. She wanted to create a public health approach to reducing the stigma that leads people to isolate and suffer alone. Safe Space Radio airs weekly on Portland’s WMPG radio in Maine and is creating specials for public radio stations across the country and worldwide as a podcast. In the past year, Safe Space Radio presented multi-part series on Women Refugees in Maine, the Maine-Wabanaki State Child Welfare Truth and Reconciliation Commission, Depression in the Workplace and PTSD among Women Veterans. The American Psychiatric Association’s Jeanne M. Spurlock Social Justice Award follows Hallward’s receipt of the Ulrich B. Jacobsohn Lifetime Achievement award by the Maine Association of Psychiatric Physicians earlier this month.

Over the past 16 years, he has led the expansion of the firm from one that primarily conducted research for Maine organizations, to one that now has a national reach. Under his leadership, the company has completed assignments for clients in 25 states, growing the company’s scope of work from smaller surveys of a few hundred completions to assignments composed of tens of thousands of surveys. He will provide overall technical leadership for company projects including research and survey design, sampling methodologies, analysis, and managing the company’s most technically complex assignments. Robertson earned doctoral and bachelor’s degrees from the University of Utah. He has more than 25 years of health care research and evaluation experience having worked in both an academic setting at University of Utah Survey Research Center and the private sector. He is a member of the American Association for Public Opinion Research and a former president of the New England Chapter of the American Association for Public Opinion Research.
