

HAPPY 105TH UMM!

PROVIDED BY UNIVERSITY OF MAINE AT MACHIAS

The University of Maine at Machias is turning 105 years old this fall and has a rich history of preparing students for the future. One of the benefits of being at a small university is the ability to make your own way. It is easy to be a leader, to belong to a student organization, to be an active player in athletics, to succeed, and you will find a natural approach to learning and the opportunity from the start of your education to be engaged in an environment like no other.

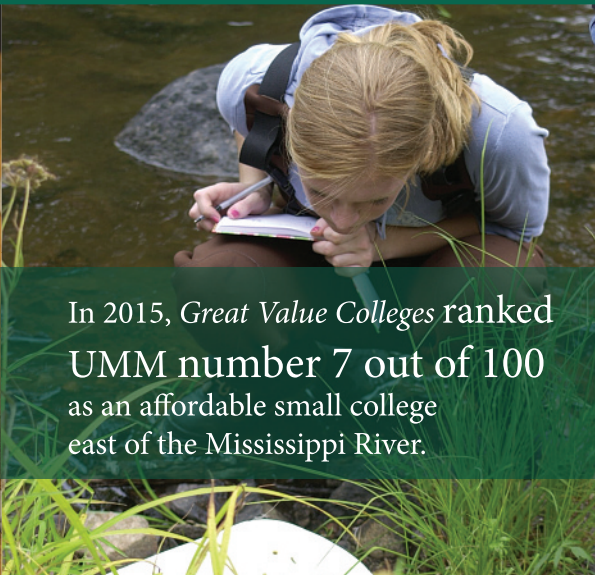

So, where do you fit in? At UMM, it's about where you'll be living and learning for a few years. UMM is about the friends and connection you'll make, the questions you'll ask and answer, the values you'll embrace or challenge, and what you want to do with your free time, and your life. The "where" of UMM is big, even though we're a small university in a small town. We're a university that is intensively about place: rugged, beautiful, coastal, and wild, yet an honest, open, diverse, and welcoming community.

Visit our campus and check out the Bold Coast of Maine. Learn why each year, a group of bright women and men discover that the Machias community is unlike others, a place in the world where YOU fit in. We're an affordable place to grow strong — in your knowledge, your life skills, and your commitment to a healthy environment. Check us out at machias.edu/tour.
